That's written a few years back, now, the new law has made major changes to your earlier ruling. I will now make an entirely new ruling to avoid the possibility of any contradictory clauses. The new law should truly reflect the true intention of the legislature. I am sure the earlier ruling will be to the advantage of the landlord at the expense of the tenant. The major changes desired are that the tenant is liable to stand for any costs, even if the landlord refuses to take over the premises, the tenant is now entitled to charge me for the amount due or the agreed amount due.

And finally, before granting any day lease, landlord will obtain your credit report from any credit information bureau, including CIBIL. Your credit report will be kept on record. Any additional information is obtained and will continue to stay on your credit bureau's record for at least seven years as a result of which you will have difficulties in getting any loan or credit facilities. A credit report gives a clear picture and it is advisable that you keep your credit history as clean as possible.
